3rd Quarter

Success Story

Rae's Playze Staff have always been great to work with. More importantly are the benefits you all have provided my son Gareth over many years. You continually work on his social skills and being exposed to others with staff to observe and direct has shown improvements. The structure provided fits Gareth and he seems happy, even when he isn't running the facility. He likes the staff, they are polite and respectful to him, teaching him the same. The involvement of you, Cindy, and the whole staff continues to be effective in Gareth's and the other consumers' lives, and we thank you. Please maintain the excellent communication and let us know where we can assist further in continuing to better Gareth's programs to meet his needs.

Respectfully,

Hans Haas

JULY ASTRONOMY

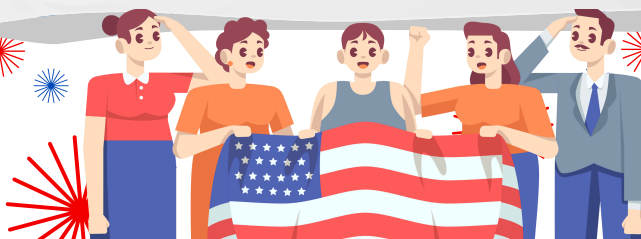

Southern Delta Aquariid meteor shower peak

The Southern Delta Aquariid (Southern δ -Aquariid) meteor shower will run from July 12 to August 23 and peak around July 31. Look for its radiant point in the constellation Aquarius. The Southern Delta Aquariids are another prolific meteor shower that is best observed from the Southern Hemisphere. In the Northern Hemisphere, the radiant appears lower in the sky; therefore, fewer meteors are visible. The meteors are quite faint and hard to spot under imperfect observation conditions. This year, the Southern Delta Aquariids reach their peak shortly after the Last Quarter Moon, and the radiant is observable until sunrise.

AUGUST ASTRONOMY

Perseid meteor shower peak

The Perseid meteor shower will run from July 17 to August 24 and peak around August 12. Look for its radiant point in the constellation Perseus. Under ideal conditions, you could see up to 100 meteors an hour. This year, the First Quarter Moon won't interfere with observations too much. In the mid-northern latitudes, the radiant will be in the sky all night.
